Plants used in brewing	use
Picea pungens, abies, glauca	Has a distinct, sweet woody taste and aroma Used as a tonic in the Revolutionary war
Juniper communis	used in Sahti, the traditional beer of Finland and Gotlandsdrika, an ancient brew of Scandinavia
Achillea filipendulina and hybrids	Widely used to bitter beer before hops became popular produces a mild, sagelike bittering
Gaultheria procumbens	can be used like birch twigs, but a lesser flavor
Galium odoratum	Used in Europe in beer and wine making. has a mild, sweet, woody aroma with hints of vanilla
Rose hips	Have a long history in brewing and are still used in Polish beers commercially
Lavandula angustifolia	Used in brewing back to the 1600's Actually has a complex bitter taste, unlike its smell
Betula papyrifera	Use goes back to the 1800's. Unlike yellow birches, paper birch should only be used for its sap, the twigs impart a very astringent taste
Monarda didyma	Used as a tea substitute in the Revolutionary War, has a bitter, minty flavor and menthol aroma
Agastache foeniculum	Native plant adds a anise flavor and aroma
